Foolish to Put High

Price on Highway

Right-of-Way

Construction plans are stirring long Arkansas' badly broken transcontinental highway, U. S. 67 and grieve travels with them. The state is having right-of-way trouble.

Recently The Star published a letter from State Senator F. C. Crow indicating there would be early action on resurfacing the trunk highway between Hope and Texarkana; but this involves no right-of-way matter — the highway land question comes up on another section of U. S. 67.

The Arkansas Democrat reported last night that in surveying the section between Benton and Little Rock which is so crooked that it has to be straightened over its entire length, the state highway department found it would cost our times as much to acquire the needed extra right-of-way on the present route as it would to condemn land for an entirely new road.

Therefore, it is proposed, with Little Rock Chamber of Commerce backing, to build a new route between Benton and the capital following the Missouri Pacific railroad through Geyer Springs and Mabelvale.

Writing in the Democrat Roy Bassett reports:

"The present route is so heavily populated with businesses all the way to the Pulaski county line and many of them are built so close to the highway it would be impossible to do anything but move them."

Therefore, of course, property owners ask high prices in condemnation proceedings — so high, in fact, that they will literally run the road away from them.

And when new U. S. 67 abandons them for a route farther south what will their roadside stands be worth? Little or nothing.

It is axiomatic that the value which accrues to a property which happily finds itself situated on a major highway is promptly devalued when the highway, unhappily, moves away from it. Wouldn't it be wiser for men to recognize this fundamental truth and stop kidding themselves into bankruptcy? Any man with a highway-inflated value on his property ought to be prepared at all times to mark it down to whatever level the condemnation proceedings require.

Either he does that or the highway goes somewhere else and he loses everything.

I saw the El Dorado-Smackover highway built four times, on four different routes — and three out of four roadside operators lost out before concrete paving finally fixed the route where it is today.

Common sense would dictate that we pick the right route the first time, but short-sighted property interests and politically vulnerable highway engineers usually combine to construct a couple of zig-zag roads before getting around to building a straight one.

Yet the record will show that both the property owners and the state lose out in the end. For in the end the highway is relocated, leaving the old property in the lurch — and the state foots the bill for both the old route and the new.

That's the issue right now on U. S. 67 between Benton and Little Rock, which is as crooked as our section is rough. But fortunately we don't have the problem of relocating the whole road. Between Benton and Little Rock they do have that problem.

Moran Appeals 5-Year Prison Sentence

New York, May 12 (AP) — James J. Moran, long-time friend of former Mayor William O'Dwyer, is appealing his five-year prison sentence for lying to the U. S. Senate crime committee.

The 49-year-old Moran, once the city water commissioner, was convicted Tuesday and sentenced yesterday.

Federal Judge Charles A. Dewey punished him to the limit of the law for perjury — five years in prison and a $2,000 fine.

Moran remained in freedom on $25,000 bond pending the outcome of the appeal.

He was convicted of perjury for telling the Senate committee on March 16 that Brooklyn mobster Tackeeter Louis Weber visited him in his office no more than half a dozen times. The government said the two met more than 100 times in Moran's office.

At the time of the visits, Moran was the hand-picked first deputy O'Dwyer now is ambassador to the commission for O'Dwyer. O'Dwyer now is ambassador to Mexico.

Weber goes on trial Monday on federal perjury charges for denying before the committee that he never visited Moran.

Moran was handed a subpoena yesterday to appear as a witness at Weber's trial.

Price Control Chops Price on Some Beef Cuts

Washington, May 12 (AP) — The price control cleaver is lopping about 12 cents a pound off some chuck steaks and pot roasts, and five to six cents off rump roast.

The reductions, ordered last night by the office of price stabilization, will show up in the dollars-and-cents ceiling prices on all beef which become effective Monday morning. Retailers must have their prices posted by June 4.

Although the new order was issued on the same day that the bureau of labor statistics reported a three per cent drop in livestock prices during the week ended May 1, it had no apparent connection with this development.

Now was there a connection with the projected general rollback which is scheduled to reduce all beef prices by about 10 cents a pound by next Oct. 1. The new order simply amends ceiling regulations to allow for "inequities" and to provide other adjustments in an order issued April 29.

Here is what the new order does:

It sets the same price for steaks and pot roasts of the varieties known as chuck arm and chuck bone, bone in.

Arm chuck was about 13 cents a pound higher than chuck blades in the original April 29 beef order. On Monday, the ceiling on arm chuck will drop 12 cents and the ceiling on chuck blades will go up one cent.

The reductions in the announced ceiling price on choice and good grade rump roasts, bone in, will bring the butcher shop price down from 84 cents a pound to about 78 cents, O. P. S. officials said. The price of choice and goodboned less rump remains at 1.12 a pound.

House Group Plans Tax on Cigarettes

Washington, May 12 (AP) — Tobacco smoke curls a big question mark over the next tax-raising of the house ways and means committee. The group already has pushed its prospective 1951 tax increases above $5,700,000,000.

The treasury wants to collect an additional half-billion dollars a year by increasing the tax on cigarettes from 7 cents a package to a dime.

Rep. Robert L. Doughton, the 87-year-old North Carolina Democrat who heads the tax-drafting group, has made it clear he intends to look out for the interests of the tobacco farmers as he has in past.

This was announced only a few hours after U. S. senators had demanded that U. S. high commissioners John J. McCloy explain why he had not stopped "Russia and her satellites from freely and openly draining our potential materials from the west German."

The 323 carloads of rails had been legally licensed for export by German authorities. A. U. S. high commission announcement said they were halted "because the shipment was deemed inadvisable."

President Ellis Waits of local No. 24, International Association of Machinists (AFL) said the union had complained to the national labor relations board. The company has not replied.

If any increase is voted, the battle over a differential for the cheaper brands is accepted as inevitable. The committee hopes to complete its tentative voting next week. The following week the staff would whip the bill into legal shape. Then, the last week in May, final decisions will be taken, nailing down or possibly revising the preliminary decisions.

If the schedule works out, the 1951 tax bill will reach the house floor Monday, June 4.

Gazette Labor Hearing Is Set

Little Rock, May 12 (AP) — A national labor relations board charge of unfair labor practices against the Arkansas Gazette will be heard beginning June 18.

The hearings were postponed from the original date of May 28.

The charge grew out of a 17-month-old strike of newsmen and circulation employees against the Gazette.

An estimated 200 to 300 men are involved in the strike.

U. S. Halts Steel for Austria

Frankfurt, 3 Germany, May 12 (AP) — American and German authorities determined to halt the flow of strategic German goods through the iron curtain — halted 4,000 tons of steel rails headed for Hungary yesterday.

The action is believed to signal the opening of a drive to halt German border leaks through which an estimated 1,000,000,000 worth of strategic goods have found their way into Communist countries since world war II.

This was announced only a few hours after U. S. senators had demanded that U. S. high commissioners John J. McCloy explain why he had not stopped "Russia and her satellites from freely and openly draining our potential materials from the west German."

Legion Head Raps Foreign Policy

St. Louis, May 12 (AP) — The national commander of the American Legion sharply assailed the administration's foreign policy today and called for an immediate all-out effort by America to win the war.

He is the first time in American history that we have gone into a war afraid that we might make our enemy mad," Commander Eric Cockey, Jr., said in a speech prepared for a celebration of the legion's founding in St. Louis 32 years ago.

"A war is justified for one reason alone and that is victory," the 20-year-old commander declared.

"The Chinese Reds have elected to fight us. They are doing everything they can to whip us. Yet our troops are ordered to pull their punches."

Cockey said America is playing into Russia's hands by its cautious policy in the Far East, and added: "What we must recognize immediately is that America must fight communism in self-defense and fight it with everything America has — and right now."

He described the nation's greatest need today as "a foreign policy that is American in origin, American in concept and American in objective."

Cockey criticized the U. S. state department and the United Nations for "playing politics with the British to save Hong Kong at the cost of American lives."

"They are encouraging aggression diplomatically by their willingness to bargain for appeasement," he said. "They are encouraging further acts of aggression by sanctioning the trading with the Chinese and Russian Communists."

The local this week was named a defendant in a suit filed by the Missouri Pacific railroad, which declared pickets had prevented it from switching freight cars onto plant property. The railroad's petition for an injunction against the union is to be heard in chancery court here Monday.

An estimated 200 to 300 men are involved in the strike.

He was taken to Josephine hospital where Dr. Walter Sims said his condition was not believed critical.

Rodeo Continues to 'Wow' Fans; Brahma Breaks Back of Clown Hoyt Hefner

Without a doubt the Third District Livestock show rodeo, under the direction of Burr Andrews, is the roughest and toughest one ever held in this section.

Tonight's performance will end the three-day stand which has played to near-capacity crowds were thrilled from start to finish.

The stock used in the rodeo is mean and tough. This fact was amply demonstrated last night when Hoyt Hefner, one of the top clown performers, was hooked by a Brahma bull and taken to a local hospital with a broken back.

Hefner was hurt in helping to lunge the beast away from its thrown rider. The Brahma tossed Hefner high in the air and butted him several times after he had fallen.

He was rushed to a local hospital where it was reported today that at least one vertebra was broken.

The incident stunned the crowd and the next bull went loose had the box seat fans running for the stands. The maddened bull practically cleared the arena before it was finally corralled.

One of the highlights of the show is Cecil Cornish and his palominos which amazed the crowd. Add to Silver Johnson's taxi, clowns Orval Munn and Stillwell Shorty, some of the roughest rodeo stock ever seen and you have the perfect setup for a night of rugged entertainment.

Tonight's show, the last of the three-day affair, starts at 8 o'clock.

Dewey Seeks Aid of Free
Nations

New York, May 11.—(P)—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey urged last night a complete embargo by all free nations against Communist China. He proposed an 11-point program to meet the threat of Russian aggression.

Dewey, speaking at the annual dinner of the New York state Republican committee, said:

"It does not mean an embargo just of rubber or steel or military equipment. I mean an absolute and total embargo against shipment of any goods or any trading whatsoever with Red China."

The New York governor told more than 2,000 $100-a-plate diners that "while the pace will change from time to time, this war will continue the rest of our lives as long as communism rules Russia."

Terming the Truman administration's Far East policy "weak, timid and wobbling," Dewey added:

"I suggest that now is the time for the force of public opinion to compel our government to formulate a policy for the whole Far East—a policy that will stop the spread of communism and start turning it back."

"(The administration) can still redeem part of its failures by adopting policies in Asia and elsewhere which our people and our allies will understand and support."

Who Is Right or Wrong Is the Question

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, May 10.—General MacArthur and Secretary of State Marshall now have had three sessions apiece to state their case before Senate committees or how to wage the Korean war.

Aside from the question of who is right or wrong, it is possible to examine, in the censored stenographic report of their testimony, how each man handled himself under questioning by the senators. It is also possible to see how some of the senators handled themselves.

Both the old soldiers — MacArthur, 61; 71 a year older — and Marshall — have great dignity and remarkable memories. Both have been military men more than half a century. Both have been responsible for making tremendous decisions since both have been in top military positions for years.

There is no doubt, from reading the word-by-word testimony, that MacArthur speaks with far greater conciseness than Marshall.

Where MacArthur makes his sentences fairly short and to the point, Marshall has the habit of weaving phrases together, making long sentences which require greater concentration to be understood fully. Marshall doesn't do this all the time. He can be very crisp. But he isn't crisp as often as MacArthur.

This doesn't mean MacArthur made more sense than Marshall. MacArthur didn't always give precise answers. And a man's ability to speak concisely doesn't mean he's more logical or convincing than one who needs a lot of words to get out an answer. Probably only history will show who was more logical and right.

Both men handled themselves on a higher plane than some of the senators on both sides — Democratic and Republican — who questioned them over six days.

Some of the Republicans were so obviously pro-MacArthur and anti-Truman policy that they asked MacArthur questions whose only purpose seemed to be to help build MacArthur up.

And some of the Republicans asked Marshall questions which wounded — crude in an evident attempt to pin him back.

Of course, as always, in a case like this, there were one or two of the self-conceited type whose long-winded pomposity made them seem can candidate for president, also demanded that China under Communist rule be barred forever from the United Nations.

Concerning the ouster of Gen. Douglas MacArthur from his Far Eastern command, Dewey said: "I do not challenge the power or the right of the President under the constitution to relieve a military commander. I do challenge the wisdom of the dismissal and the shabby manner in which it was done."

Dewey agreed with MacArthur in advocating more aid and freedom of action to Chiang Kai-shek and recognition of Formosa's importance to Japanese and American defense.

The governor did not endorse MacArthur's demands that Chinese Manchurian bases be bombed and a naval blockade placed against the mainland, saying:

"I am not a military expert and I do not have access to the intelligence reports."

"(The administration) can still redeem part of its failures by adopting policies in Asia and elsewhere which our people and our allies will understand and support."

MacArthur Warned in January

Paris, May 12.—(AP)—French Titlist Leader Darius Le Corre was giving newsman his views on politics yesterday when a group of young Communists strode in, hit him in the eye and made a shambles of his office. He finally escaped in a taxi cab.

Le Corre was hit in the eye and made a shambles of his office. He finally escaped in a taxi cab.

This was contained in a message sent by the president as a follow up to a set of 16 possible courses of action the joint chiefs of staff had dispatched to MacArthur the previous day.

The text of the President's message, in paraphrased form, was read by Secretary of Defense Marshall to Senate committees inquiring into MacArthur's dismissal as Far Eastern commander.

At the outset, the President said his telegram "was not to be taken in any sense as a directive." He added that "its purpose is to give you something of what is in our minds regarding the political factors."

At one place the presidential message read:

"Our course of action at this time should be such as to consolidate the great majority of the United Nations. This majority is not merely part of the organization but is also the nations whom we would desperately need to count on as allies in the event the Soviet Union moves against us."

Earlier, Marshall told the senators the risk of war with Russia in the Far East is "more acute" by far than the hazard of Soviet intervention in Western Europe. This estimate of the comparative risks was given in response to a question from Senator Hickenlooper (R-Ia).

Hickenlooper had suggested the United States was risking a clash with Russia by sending troops to a western European defense force. He wanted to know why "a similar calculated risk" was refused in the Far East — meaning why not adopt the MacArthur program of stepping up the war against China.

Since Marshall first referred earlier in the hearings to the President's Jan. 13 message, some members of the Senate committee had pressed to get the text.

They contended the communication to MacArthur also said:

"Further, pending the buildup of our national strength we must act with great prudence in so far as extending the area of hostilities is concerned."

"Steps which might in themselves be justified and which might lend some assistance to the campaign in Korea would not be beneficial if they thereby involved Japan or Western Europe in large-scale hostilities."

The President said also that "in the present world situation your forces must be preserved as an effective instrument for the defense of Japan and elsewhere."

Marshall told the senators that Mr. Truman's message was sent to MacArthur "to give him political factors" involved in the tentative proposals advanced the previous day by the joint chiefs of staff for meeting various contingencies in the Korean campaign.

"The directive" from the joint chiefs, Marshall said, contained no political aspects "and therefore it was thought desirable that the president should send a message to general MacArthur with the political factors and overall directives of the government."

Mr. Truman advised MacArthur that "successful resistance" in Korea would serve these purposes:

killer delivered up, but it had been a painful process to her.

"You weren't so far ahead of me," I told Star. "I finally tumbled to the fact that Frannie had drowned in that tank. I figured Wertheim and Prater in on that, and even guessed why you sent me up to Valleyille to ask a single question of Espan and Brayton. When you broke into the Frater offices last night you got their names off the caller list and figured a special demonstration had been put on for them. You knew that if I asked whether they'd known Frannie Martin, they'd realize you knew the truth. Naturally they'd try to hire you to defend them. After that it was easy for you to sell them the idea they should sign an affidavit telling the truth. They were innocent bystanders, and a little scandal was better than being made accomplices. But how did they find you tonight? You didn't dare go near the office."

"I told Kitty where I could be located. She had instructions to send them to me."

"Well, it was close timing. I'll grant that I couldn't have produced Frannie's killer by the deadline. No, I didn't talk! Wertheim didn't talk! Clara didn't talk! Nobody but Star Williams talked! That's all—nobody but Star Williams."

He continued to laugh on the hysteria borderline as McNamara tried to get some sense out of him. I figured there was no reason for McNamara to be in such a hurry. There would be plenty of time.

Sonya, Star and I were out in the corridor when Nick Ricardo showed up, complete with candid camera.

"Say, what's going on around here?"

"Star just worked another piece of magic. Too bad you weren't here with your cute little camera!" Ricardo brushed by us and in to see Merica. I chuckled. Merica would not be easy to deal with this night, and I wouldn't have wanted my worst enemy to have to get a story out of Andy Tanner."

"There's one thing more," Star told Inspector Merica, padding toward Wertheim. "Tonight this man would have repeated his performance of faking the drowning by auto accident to my two friends, Star Williams and Jim Marshall."

Quietly but with a wealth of verbiage, Miss Clara Mayhew began to tell Star Williams exactly what she thought of him. She was still getting him told when a man came and took her out.

"There's one thing more," Star told Inspector Merica, padding toward Wertheim. "Tonight this man would have repeated his performance of faking the drowning by auto accident to my two friends, Star Williams and Jim Marshall."

Star made no argument on this point. I suggested: "We ought to phone the story to Max Feldstein for his final."

Star yawned. "Oh, I phoned him the story before I went over to Merica's. I suppose he will have to check some minor details with Merica, though it did turn out as I gave it to him."

Paul looked at me, grinned and shook his head. I looked at Sonya. She smiled. "Hello, Sonya. How's trick?"

New York Strike Is Called Off

New York, May 12.—(AP)—A threatened strike that would have crippled elevator service for 175,000 persons in 1,200 apartment buildings has been averted by the granting of a wage boost.

More than 18,000 elevator operators, and 2,000 building service workers, of Local 32-B, of the AFL building services employees union, were set to strike Monday.

But yesterday their bargaining agents and the reality advisory board agreed to a settlement proposed by Marilyn S. Pilz, chairman of the state mediation board.

The agreement provided a $2.50-a-week wage increase with $1 a week additional for welfare benefits, and a reduction from 48 to 46 hours in the work week to take effect in 18 months.

Present wages range from $48.45 to $54.91 a week.

The union had sought a $60 a week minimum wage, a 40-hour week and a welfare fund to be financed by employer contributions of two per cent of gross rentals.

A three-year "no strike" or lockout contract is also part of the settlement.

Rita Hayworth Is in Reno

She arrived quietly last evening to join her two children, Rebecca, 6, and Yasmin, who've been here a week with servants.

The actress' Reno attorney, William Woodburn Jr., said she would seek a divorce or a separate maintenance order.

Miss Hayworth was accompanied on her automobile trip from New York by Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Leighter. Leighter is a radio actors' agent.

13 KILLED

New Delhi, India, May 12.—(P)—A spokesman for India's government-owned railways said today 13 persons were killed and 21 injured yesterday in two train accidents.

The spokesman said nine persons were killed and 11 injured at Darbhanga when a passenger train collided with a switch engine. Four others were killed and 10 injured near Nagpur when fire gutted a passenger coach on the Cauca to Bombay mail train.

a couple of dances with both his parents and his. I want to be to him because he will come home to me when his twenty-one month old son is up. Please tell me what should do to pass the time while waiting for my soldier.

JOAN

Answer: You don't say whether you are working or going to school. Presumably you are doing one or the other. If you are working, why not take some evening course, add to your education, or learn a skill that will surprise your sweet heart when he comes home? You could take up sewing, cooking, interior decoration, so you will be better equipped to manage your own home.

If you are presently going school during the day, you could still take one of these courses at night, or perhaps a part-time job would fill in your spare hour. Then, of course, there is the letter writing to your soldier, which must not be neglected. You don't have to look far to find a charitable organization waiting with open arms for volunteer workers. And, if this sounds like lots of work but very little fun, make new girl friends to keep you company and movie dates.
